

California Auto Insurance

Get discount auto insurance that won't break your bank account at InsureMe.

From San Francisco to San Diego, and everywhere in between, California drivers can rest assured that we instantly match you with the most competitive companies in the business. You'll get at least five quotes for car insurance so you can compare and start saving. At InsureMe, in addition to providing the best car insurance quotes, we safeguard your personal information from unwanted spam. Understand that we'll never sell or rent your email address to anyone for any reason.

You'll find glimmering savings in the Golden state by filling out your request for an auto insurance quote today. Once you do, you'll be saying "Eureka!" with the dollars you save on your California car insurance.

Whether your travels take you to the depths of Death Valley or the top of Mr. Whitney, the highest peak in the lower 48 states, you'll know that with InsureMe you will be covered at the best possible price for auto insurance. With other companies that might offer three rates, InsureMe takes it a step further by offering a minimum of five. This takes the hassle out of calling various companies or submitting numerous on-line forms. For those movers and shakers in L.A., who has time to sit and wait? With InsureMe you get the best auto insurance quotes, in greater numbers and at marvelous discounts other car insurance companies don't offer.

Did you know that one out of every eight United States residents lives in California? It's true. And that means there are countless auto insurance companies out there to choose. InsureMe helps cut that search by finding the best places for your auto insurance needs the quickest way possible.

Maybe you need auto insurance for travel to work in Simi Valley. Perhaps you require car insurance for family trips to see the giant redwoods in Sequoia National Park or Pacific Park, on Santa Monica Pier along the Pacific Coast. The point is, whatever your auto insurance needs - business or pleasure, work or fun - InsureMe has you covered from bumper to bumper.

How your credit affects your auto insurance premiums

Credit ratings are used by auto insurance companies to determine whether to accept a customer and how much it should cost the customer. Companies use this credit information for auto insurance risk assessment. What that means basically is if someone is financial 'unsafe' they can expect to pay more as a driver. On the other hand, if you improve your credit then you might also improve the cost of your insurance premiums.

First, you'll need to look at your credit report. There are three main reporting agencies - Choice Point (<http://www.choicepoint.net/>), Experian (<http://www.experian.com/>) and TransUnion (<http://www.transunion.com/>). Each report requires you pay a fee to see the report but it might save you money. Sometimes errors do occur such as paid medical bills or student loans that show up as unpaid. A measly $20 bill from a cell phone company three years ago might be costing you hundreds more in premiums a year. It's also best to check your reports for identity theft too. Someone could be using your credit information without your knowledge and killing your credit, not to mention raising your rates. If you find an error within your report be sure to contact that credit reporting company and let them know. They'll have 30 days to respond to your query on why something is there that shouldn't be.

With that said, there are other ways you can improve your credit. One is to keep a minimum of credit cards and keep the balances low. The way to do this is to have maybe 2 to 3 cards at the most. Use one card for online purchases only (this helps protect against internet fraud because it's easier to see what is on the statement each month) and one for brick and mortar (regular store) purchases. The third card could be used for emergencies only. The point is this: the less revolving credit you have the better it looks to insurance companies.

Another tip is paying your bills on time. If you habitually make late payments it will show up on your credit report for two years and the auto insurance company might think twice about insuring you or charge you higher rates as a result. If you can't pay your bills on time it's more headaches (and possible legal hassles) for them. Your business is just not worth the risk and if they do take your business they'll make you pay more money so they can recoup any loss when you fail to pay them on time.

As with most things in life, the best action when it comes to credit and your auto insurance premiums is to be informed. Know what is on your credit report. Once you arm yourself with information then you can go insurance shopping and find the best prices.

Keyword Article – Kid Camping

Kid Camping Made Easy

Just because you have children doesn't mean you have to give up the freedom of the outdoors. Kid camping just takes a little more planning and preparation. The Internet is an excellent place to start when it comes to finding locations and trails that will suit your needs and child's age group.

With babies, toddlers and preschool campers you need to consider their warmth factor. They need to be kept warm to keep them from getting sick. Be sure not to take small children camping in places that are very cold or exceedingly hot.

Be certain to pack all the kid camping gear you'll need which includes but not limited to – extra clothes, boots, diapers, blankets, topical antiseptic (for scratches if needed), books and toys for entertainment, etc. You can use a checklist to be sure that you don't forget anything.

Busy Toddlers, Busy Parents

Kid camping with a toddler/preschooler can be more difficult than camping with a baby. Toddlers are always 'on the go'. It's a big job to keep up with a busy child. You need to keep watch all the time to keep them out of mischief. Sitting in the car can seem like forever to them so again plan carefully and have fun things ready to entertain them until you reach your camping spot.

Dangers around Every Corner

There are a lot of dangers to watch out for when you're camping with kids. Keeping them away from bears, skunks, etc. can be rather stressful. You also have to be careful to keep them away from the fire. All kids are attracted to water, so nearby lakes or streams are another hazard. And as always, keeping an eye out for suspicious strangers is essential.

Camping with Older Kids

For older children, ages six to ten, again make sure that your kid's camping gear is all in order. Kids love to have their own kids camping equipment, sleeping bag, tent, flashlight, etc. Kids love to help with the cooking. You can let them help select the food lists and choose what foods they want. Kids can be included in many of the camp chores and clean up.

Keeping Kids Busy

There are lots of fun kids camping activities to keep your children busy during your camping trip. For the trip to your camp spot, you can make up games like 'license plate' bingo, 'name that state capital' or just singing camp songs. Once you reach the spot where you'll be bunking down for your kid's camping trip remember the things you loved to do like making shadow puppets on the tent walls or telling scary stories (if they can handle that kind of thing, of course). Another great idea is to give each child a disposable camera (in case it gets lost) so they can take photos of the camping trip. When you get home you can frame them or make their own photo album to show off to friends and family.

Hanging out with Teens

Once your child enters those pre-teen and teen years they want more independence. Remember being 16? Hanging out with your parents wasn't so cool. So let your teen help plan the trip and give them the responsibility to make sure they have all their camping gear in order. On the trip to your camping destination give them the role of navigator so they are still taking part. When it comes to your kid's camping trip itself use the time to talk to them and build relationships - share stories about your teen years or stories about other trips you've taken that they might have forgotten.

Kid camping and learning about nature is a great way to bond with your child, no matter what the age, so use it to your full advantage. Then your time will be well spent and the memories you make will last a lifetime.
